ABOUT ME

Cheryl Whitten is a professional writer, speaker, entrepreneur, and Clinical Aromatherapist. She graduated Athabasca University with a Bachelor of Arts With Distinction in English Literature and graduated Essence of Thyme College of Holistic Studies with Honours in a 600 hour certification in Advanced Aromatherapy. Cheryl studied stress reduction and aromatherapy and presented research at the Canadian Mental Health Association Alberta annual conference and her work has appeared in the International Journal of Professional Holistic Aromatherapy. She is the host of The Aromatherapist podcast where she clarifies myths around aromatherapy, and talks to leading natural health physicians, psychologists, nurses, and others. She has used essential oils for 16 years and has a passion for all things natural. Her greatest accomplishment is raising three children whose first medicinal choices are essential oils.
